SPOTLIGHT

Chevron Phillips Golden Triangle Polymers Project Daniel Sprunk– Project Manager

Pile driving continues on at the Chevron Phillips – Golden Triangle Polymers Project in Orange, TX. Cajun’s continues to have a great working relationship with Zachry Industrial and Burns & McDonnell.

In October of 2022, Cajun mobilized cranes and crews to the CP Chem facility in SE Texas to begin the test pile program. Production piling started in early January and has ramped up to 6 total crews on the OSBL portion of the work. In April, Cajun mobilized 6 additional crews to the project to begin the ISBL production piling. In total, the project will include over 10,000 precast concrete piles ranging in length from 35’ to 80’ long, as well as a large sheet

Brad Dupuis- While performing an inspection of the leads, I discovered the pile line was ran improperly under a cross brace in the head section. I notified the crew, we did an inspection of the cable, removed the becket and reinstalled the cable properly.

Ronald West- I saw that there wasn't a hard barricade around a 8' deep trench in our work area. I contacted supervisor/safety to get a barricade put in place. In the meantime, I roped up a red barricade until the hard barricade was installed.

Richard Abshire-While inspecting the leads I noticed the pins for adjusting the spotter were backing out. Upon closer inspection it was identified that the pins were so short that the cotter keys couldn't be installed. I notified supervision of the finding, and they scheduled to have replacement pins shipped and installed.

Mason Leger- I saw a coworker standing on the opposite side of the trailer while the loader was unloading pipe. I stopped the loader, told employee my concerns and directed him to a proper location out of the line of fire.
